Beetlebung

Indians came first. Wampanoags boiled down whale oil for lighting that burned brighter and longer than candles. Islanders followed and turned to large wooden casks to store and transport oil; and from a local tree, they made necessary tools. The "beetle" was a hard wooden mallet. The "bung" was a wooden stopper.

Folks dubbed the tree a Beetlebung. Hard as nails, it grew up until the salt air made it go sideways in a peculiar way.

Demand for oil boomed. Whalers "beetled" bungs into casks to seal and ship them faraway. Schooners, casks, beetles, and bungs formed a pipeline to the world.

Then it ended. "Coal oil," Rockefeller, the Civil War, modernity. A reprieve for the whales.

Martha's Vineyard is a precious place.
